

Reading Tracks

BY HONEY ANT READERS

Making reading fun for learners of all ages

About the Reading Tracks series

The series consists of an initial 15 colourful books, brilliantly illustrated, that start at the very beginning of a learner's reading journey.

Book 1 introduces the reader to 9 words, which gradually progresses to 154 words by Book 15.

Then 7 more advanced books round off the series – offering more able readers interesting, culturally relevant and informative stories. Each story has been developed with sound pedagogy and in collaboration with Elders.

The books include:

- Stories relating to traditional, Indigenous cultural food-gathering practices;
- Fishing for barramundi;
- Tracking and hunting for emus, perenties, kangaroos, cattle, echidnas, camels and goannas;
- Digging for witchetty grubs and honey ants;
- A story about the first Alice Springs Camel Cup, amusingly told by Luritja/Arranda man and camel musterer, Vincent Forrester;
- A San hunting story set in Southern Africa, by popular request.

Join Reading Tracks® on a cultural journey through the beautiful landscapes of the Australian central deserts and the northern rivers, oceans and islands, with a bonus hunting trip into Southern Africa with the San people.

Reading Tracks® books grew out of a desire to provide relevant and culturally affirming stories for older Indigenous literacy learners - books that would engage and excite them.

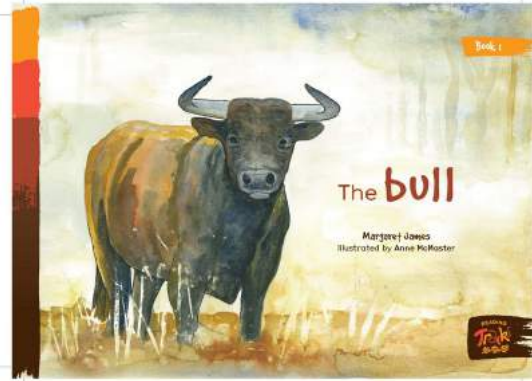

At the same time, the creators of the series hope that all young Australians will learn from the First Australians' ancient cultures and practices of food gathering - from tracking and hunting in the central deserts to fishing on the coast.

The Elders involved in the development of these books, and the many students who wanted to share their stories, expressed their desire to have books about true stories, fishing, traditional bush tucker skills, and the old ways of tracking and hunting.

In order to achieve this, Margaret James worked very closely with Elders and students, going on bush trips and yarning about tracking, hunting and fishing for many hours, to ensure that the stories were culturally accurate.

Elders edited the books to confirm that they were appropriate for publication, and students gave their feedback after reading them.

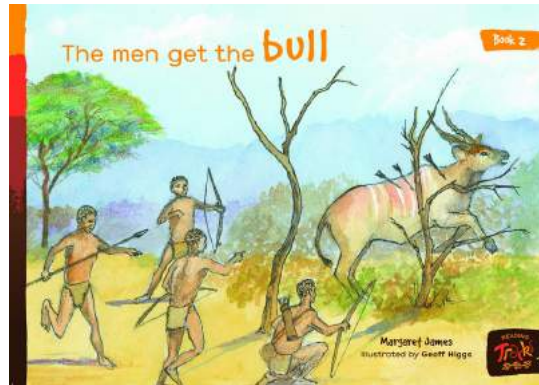

The Bull

By Margaret James & illus. by Anne McMasters

2 men go tracking and hunting for cattle on horseback in the hot, dusty Central Australian Desert. When they return to the Cattle Station yards a few days later with several young bulls, their enthusiastic children enjoy watching the process from behind the safety of the wooden rails. Book 1 in the Reading Tracks series.
