Editor Bio:

Wendy Bruere is a writer, editor and freelance adventure journalist. Currently the Assistant Editor of Vertical Life magazine, she has also written for Wild magazine, Great Walks, We Are Explorers, and more. She has published two previous anthologies, including the award-winning More Than It Hurts, which received a Special Jury Mention in the 2021 Banff Mountain Book Competition. The inspiration to create this book came after she struggled to find accessible material on climate science and decided to create the book she wanted to read—engaging scientists' stories to help an interested layperson like herself to understand the essential concepts behind climate science.

Adventures in Climate Science

Scientists' tales from the frontiers of climate change

By Wendy Bruere

Forwarded by Karl Kruszelnicki

Key Sales Points:

- * Combines science with story-telling—and a good dose of adventure.
- * Of particular interest to high school and undergraduate students considering a career climate science.
- * Authors paint evocative pictures of working in some of the world's most remote and remarkable places.

The experts tell us the world is warming, but why do we care so much about a few lousy degrees? These tales of adventure from remote and remarkable parts of the Earth explore a multitude of ways the world is changing and explain the science behind exactly what those few degrees mean.

Scientists share their own stories about falling into crevasses, facing sharks, surviving cyclones, chasing pirates on the high seas, and more. Along the way, they examine critical elements of climate change, including sea ice and glacier melt, rising sea levels, bushfires, collapsing ecosystems, shifting ocean currents, and extreme weather events. With knowledge comes power, and this book makes sense of how and why a warming planet matters.

Includes contribution from Brisbane distinguished glaciologist, Ian Allison.
